A Lesson I Have Learnt

Last week, there was a typhoon. I was on my way home from school.

When I was in the bus stop to queue, I saw not all people had an umbrella.

After I got on the bus, I thought that the bus stop was next to my building so I didn't worry.

After a while, the bus driver said, "Sorry, you all have to get off." I saw a tree fell down and the storm didn't turn well. Suddenly, a man asked the driver, "Can you get past the tree?" "No, the tree is too big," said the bus driver.

Soon, I ran and ran because I was very cold and I was shivering. The clothes were getting soaked and my backpack was wet too.

After I got back home, my mum asked me why I was wet. I told her it was raining outside. My mum smiled and said, "Where is your umbrella?" Then I remembered I forgot to bring back my umbrella from school. My brother said, "It is funny." In the end, I learnt that I shouldn't forget to bring back all my personal belongings.

Teacher's comment: Good try of writing dialogues! Try to use different talking verbs.
