

A Lost Bag

5B Ngai Cheuk Ki, Chloe

Yesterday afternoon, it was lunchtime. Chris and Jane went to a food shop. There were a lot of people and it was noisy. Chris and Jane took seats to have their lunch and the two men left without the briefcase.

Later, Chris and Jane found an empty table to have their lunch and they took the seats but then they found a briefcase on the chair. The table was also very messy. They were curious and surprised because they found a briefcase. They did not know what to do. When they opened the briefcase, they found a bunch of bank notes. They were shocked and decided to bring the money back to the police station because stealing things is wrong.

After a while, Chris and Jane finally arrived to the police station and they gave the briefcase to the police officers. The police thanked Chris and Jane for bringing the bank notes back to the police station happily. However, the police could not find the owner of the briefcase. Chris and Jane thought that the owner would be worried about the money. After this experience, they learnt that they should keep an eye on their personal belongings. In the end, they decided that they would look after their personal belongings and never steal things.

Good manners on public transport

5B Kwok Yuen Yin, Chloe

In Hong Kong, there is a good public transport system. When we take the public transport, we should follow some rules.

It is always busy and crowded on MTR. We shouldn't push one another because it is rude. We should keep the train clean. Although there are many passengers on MTR, we should walk slowly and carefully. Accidents won't happen.

On the bus, we shouldn't smoke because it may cause a fire. We shouldn't disturb the bus driver because it is too dangerous. We should speak softly on the mobile phone, if not, it is too annoying.

When we get into a taxi, we should talk to the driver politely. We shouldn't sing or speak loudly in the taxi. We shouldn't disturb the driver while he is driving.

It is important to behave well on the public transport. Therefore, we should be considerate and obey the rules. Everyone enjoys a safe and comfortable journey.

Chloe, the flow of your text is smooth. You are able to write concrete and related ideas. Your choice of words is simple but clear! Keep it up!

The lost bag in a fast food shop

5B Leung Chung Yin, Samuel

In an afternoon, Chris and Jane went into a fast food shop to have lunch. They first ordered the food. Then they found a table.

They saw a briefcase on the seat. It was valuable. They wanted to ask the help of the staff in the fast food shop. However, they were too busy and so no one listened to them. They were starving and they decided to finish their lunch first.

After lunch, they decided to leave and Jane wanted to call the police. At that moment, Chris opened the bag and saw a wad of banknotes. They felt shocked. Then a security guard came and asked them what was going on. They told him the case and he would call the police.

Suddenly, a man in a suit ran into the fast food shop and asked, "Have you seen my briefcase? It is very important to me." Then the security guard said, "Is it yours?" The man nodded and answered, "Yes, it's mine. Thank you very much!" Chris and Jane gave it back to him and they all felt delighted.

Nice work! I like your details of the story. Good use of different adjectives!

A bag of money

5B He Minyu, Michael

Chris and his sister, Jane, went to a fast food shop for lunch yesterday. The shop was full, but they spotted an empty table after they bought the food. They felt lucky.

When they got to the table, they saw a bag on one of the chairs. They felt puzzled. They opened the bag and looked inside. They found a lot of money inside. They were shocked because it was a big sum of money.

After a short discussion, they thought the owner must be very worried about his lost bag. They decided to find the owner and return the bag to him. They asked a staff for help.

At last, they found the owner of the bag. He thanked them with a big smile.

Teacher's comment

A nice description of the pictures and you gave the story a good ending. The use of connectives like "because", "but" and "at last" did help you write it fluently. Good job, Michael!

Good manners on public transport

5B Siu Grace

We should behave well at home, at school and at public places. We should have good manners on public transport.

When we are waiting at the station, we should wait patiently. We should not jump the queue or push in.

When we are on the train or bus, we should not talk loudly. We should not eat or drink. We should not play music loudly. We should play games quietly. We should not run around. We should give way to others.

Everyone of us wants to be a polite person. We do not want other people feel that we are rude.

If everybody has good manners on public transport, all people will travel happily.

Teacher's comment

The sentences you used are short and simple, but they can convey your ideas clearly. I like your ending which carries a very nice and encouraging message to the readers. Good job, Grace!
